United Religions Initiative

The United Religions Initiative (URI) is a global, grassroots, interfaith network that cultivates peace and justice by engaging people of all religions and cultures to bridge differences, and work together for the good of their communities and the world.

URI implements its mission through local and global initiatives in over 100 countries that build the capacity of its nearly 900 member groups, called Cooperation

Circles. These Cooperation Circles undertake community action projects on issues such as conflict resolution and reconciliation, economic development, education, environmental sustainability, human rights, women's empowerment, and youth leadership.

Supported by a global office in San Francisco and 21 regional offices on six continents, URI's decentralized, network-based approach to dealing with issues of poverty, conflict, and violence is giving people around the world the power to transform their struggles, and build cohesive, connected, and thriving communities.

Giving to URI supports the global network of grassroots groups, providing them with the training, mentoring, coaching, communications systems, and connection to a global network of support. Giving to URI creates peace, justice, and healing in communities around the world.

URI members of different faiths gather in Israel to pray for peace in Syria

“When you support URI, you elevate hope and help build a peaceful world, one community at a time.”
